Criticism leads to support, LDS told

ALT LAKE CITY — Criticism at the LDS Church's stand on Equal Rights Amendment has led to support for the church, members say over the weekend.

On Saturday, 181st Semiannual General Conference concluded Sunday, without the traditional closing session by President Spencer W. Kimball, who still recovered from a skull surgery Sept. 5.

But President Hinckley said the recent criticism of the church, which has been criticized have years, the church has moved in a remarkable way.

"They have been years in which millions of members have been added," he said Saturday morning. "They have been years in which the strong and strident voices have been raised again."

group marched, with a police escort, to the temple grounds.

ERA supporters were not the only people making noise just outside the Temple Square walls Saturday, 17 anti-abortion protesters, all claiming to be local Mormons or ex-Mormons, picketed outside temple walls with signs, including one that alien criticized Mormon doctrine. At times they shouted for support or to be allowed to speak to the president of the LDS Church's position.

But President Hinckley said the recent criticism of the church, which has been criticized have years, the church has moved in a remarkable way.

"They have been years in which millions of members have been added," he said Saturday morning. "They have been years in which the strong and strident voices have been raised again."

Church criticized

"We have been criticized because of our stand on the Equal Rights Amendment. But the criticism has in no way deterred the progress of the church," he said. "It has added many to our defense and our support. In some instances it has added to our strength."

Speaking about sustaining church leaders, Elder Mark E. Petersen of the LDS Council of the Twelve, said, "If we have a voice, if we have a voice against them, or if we ignore them, we are not in that manner serving the Lord. We are not commissioning them as his servants. Can anyone afford to do that?"

President Hinckley received applause and extended a hand from many of the 29 General Authorities who spoke in four general sessions, a spiritual and welfare session.

Elder Robert D. Hale of the First Presidency, who succeeded President Kimball to Job of the Old Testament. Although President Hinckley has endured many trials, Hale said, "He has not charged God foolishly."

"The course of the faith of President Hinckley is to overcome trials and difficulties in his life," he said. "He has stood up to them, to us, to testify that we, too, can meet the aches and pains and difficulties in our lives in worldwide membership of the 4.7 million church will receive

Priesthood session

Men told to train for vocation

By DAVID SCHNEIDER
Staff Copy Editor

LDS young men were told to get an education that will help them in the vocation they choose.

LDS priesthood holders were also counseled to strengthen their quorums, not to misuse free agency, nor to go to athletic events and to stay morally clean.

Five General Authorities of the LDS Church spoke at Saturday night's priesthood session of the church's 15th Semiannual General Conference.

Choose voca-

"When you choose your vocation and train for it, you qualify yourself for your vocation," said President Gordon B. Hinckley, a counselor in the First Presidency. "Education is a shortcut to prosperity. Make it possible to leap over the mistakes of the past."

President Hinckley said he does not imply everyone should become professional men.

"Regardless of the vocation you choose, you can gain from education."

President Marion G. Romney, second counselor in the First Presidency, Elder Boyd K. Packer and L. Tom Perry, members of the LDS Council of the Twelve; and Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric, also spoke Saturday night.

Conference transmitted

The conference was transmitted to more than 2,300 locations worldwide, including the Marriott Center where the session started at 7 p.m., and the audience increased to about 18,000 people.

Several hundred people left early, apparently not wanting to hear the closing song or benediction.

President Hinckley said education is a standard to be sought "one of his 'B's for boys" by all, advising remarks to the church's younger priesthood holders.

The other B's are: be fair, be clean and be true.

Being fair

Being fair includes treating non-Mormons with friendliness. It also includes respect at athletic contests. "There is no occasion for boozing or catcalling," Hinckley said. "It should not be changed by all the boozing in the world."

"Being clean is not to be squeamish," President Hinckley said. "It is to avoid situations that threaten the ability to control one's thoughts."

"No good will come of going to movies that are designed only to take your money and give you waste."

Elder Perry said priesthood quorums have three functions: a class, fraternity and service. "The class function is to teach the gospel and fulfill only part of its purpose," Elder Perry said.

President Romney said misuse of free agency can lead to loss of liberty. "While political influence, economic freedom and free agency contribute to liberty of the soul, they do not guarantee it."

Pro-ERA picketers becoming regular conference occurrence

SALT LAKE CITY

More than 35 pro-Equal Rights Amendment activists, mostly women, picketed Temple Square, and two men stood on the steps of the State Capitol in support of ERA policy — No!

During general conference, many were marching in an effort to gain support from church

The protesters, who marched outside the walls of the Tabernacle, were led by Lee Anne Walker, president of the Equal Rights Coalition of Utah. The group's activities began with a rally on the steps of the State Capitol at 10 a.m.

In one of the most unusual events of the day, Mrs. Uebelungen, a member of the Daughters of Liberty and a returned general conference attendee, said: "There is no point in returning to the Women's Church if the ERA has not damaged the ERA.

Their destructive influence in the church if the ERA is dead is their belief that we cannot breathe life back into it."

Referring to the period of time allotted to the states for the ratification of the ERA, Karen Beard, a member of the other speech given at the rally: "We've waited 25 years for男女平等. Don't you think two more years is

Accompanied by a police escort, the protesters sang ERA spiritual songs as they marched from the Capitol down State Street and North Temple Street to Temple Square.

Armed with banners and signs, the picketers chanted, "Hey, hey, What do you say? What do you do? What do you want? What do you want? ERA! What do you want?"

The group, consisting of several states and church members, denounced the LDS Church's stand on ERA, claiming the leaders of the church are too rigid.

Cheri Dalton, who stood with Camille Amos and said "no" in support of the ERA, said: "The sustaining of the General Authorities, the First Presidency, and the ERA is a moral issue. The church is just at the wrong end of the spectrum."

"The basis of the gospel is freedom. The church's anti-ERA stand shows a lack of vision within the First Presidency," Miss Dalton said.

"Sooner or later they'll (the First Presidency) change their stand if it's the right thing," Miss Walker said.

"HOW FAMILIES INFLUENCE THEIR CHILDREN'S INTELLIGENCE"

When psychologists think about the effects of families on their children, they nearly always consider the ways that parents treat them. Some families insist on obedience above all else, whereas others value independence in their children, and it is these two extremes that children experience that are most often the subject of psychological study. This preoccupation with the effects of parenting behaviors has shown to be a small part of the story of family effects.

In addition to families, parents also transmit their genes to their children. Genetic differences among families are important in explaining why children differ in intelligence. Genetic differences among sisters and brothers also contribute to difference in intelligence within families. Furthermore, genetic differences are likely to be complicated by environmental influences. Bright children are more likely to evoke intellectually stimulating interactions with others, and they are more likely to seek out intellectual challenges. Conversely, less bright children who are brighter genetically also experience more stimulating environments, which add to their intellectual development.

In this lecture, I will discuss research on how families affect the intellectual development of their children through genetic and environmental paths and how genes and environments come to be correlated.

Plain-talk crusade steps up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige is winning enthusiastic public support for his crusade against bureaucrats who misuse the English language.

"Hallelujah, Brother! You caused estacy to be used," a Jacksonville, Fla., woman wrote to Baldrige. "I am so glad you are out to weed out over long or incorrect language in government."

The campaign was stepped up this summer and Baldrige has received dozens of letters from around the country since he started his plain-talk campaign in March with a memo on the words he didn't want to see in his employees' correspondence.

forbidden words or phrases appeared on the television-like screen.

Secretary Baldrige's "Writing Style" says the commerce chief wants less sentences, active verbs and no unnecessary adjectives or adverbs.

At last, a game with dirty plays

Despite Saturday's rainy weather, a mud football game between two BYU clubs managed to take place behind the new Leo Ellsworth Maat and Livestock Center. Members of Ag Associates, a biological and agricultural sciences club, competed against Block and Bridle club.

The animal sciences club. The winner of the game was not determined; however, both teams managed to soak up an equal amount of mud. The cold front which brought thunderstorms to the area dropped more than an inch of rain over the weekend.

Conference weekend activities keep students' schedules filled

By CATHY CRITCHLOW

Whichever of activities, music from listening to talks to dancing along with Christopher Cross kept students busy during the conference weekend.

The weekend included something for everyone. Conference activities included socializing, and even students who didn't listen to conference were able to find plenty to do.

Activities included the BYU vs. USU football game, amateur Opera concert, priesthood session, missionary resign parties.

If Needs, who is not a member of the LDS Church, said he "knew what conference weekend was, but he was planning to attend."

WAC conference, what's conference weekend?" said the junior from Nampa, Idaho, majoring in psychology.

On Sunday, around here, not even the bugs move," said and more than "the bugs" are moving, however, for visitors who to campus during conference weekend.

On Stirling, a BYU graduate in humanities from Northwood, Calif., said he came back to Provo especially for conference. "Conference is a time of 'anticipation of things that might be,'" he said, "a chance for spiritual growth, a kind of restarting."

Stirling said conference weekend will be a time to "relax for him." He will be missing regular football games, conference priesthood sessions and listened to general conference while enjoying himself with his friends, he said.

The green in the Provo Canyon attracted some conference attendees. Stirling, who is from the mountains of Canada with an undecided major, said he was up in the canyon to listen to Saturday's session.

Podd Anderson, a senior majoring in administrative management from Orem, said he drove up to Salt Lake to listen to conference on the lawn of Temple Square.

"Conference is relaxed, kickback with lots to do," said Anderson. "After conference he went to the game, and to a stake party after priesthood session."

Michelle Midkiff, a freshman from Phoenix, Ariz., majoring in psychology, described conference weekend as a time when "tons of people swarm to Utah."

Home evening

"Conference is a time when I don't have to go to church. I can sleep in and stay in my pajamas. It's a week off from church," said Bob Wilson, a student from San Diego, Calif.

Some family have even grown closer together during conference. A group from Rainier cooked breakfast for each other.

Many students who live in the dorms flocked together and said they had fun listening to conference in a big group.

Conference weekend is a week of travel, fun and spiritual growth, the students agreed. There was something for all to do.

Conference listeners to follow LDS prophets

TAMMI WRIGHT
Wright, Editor

SALT LAKE CITY — Speakers during the second session of the 151st Semiannual General Conference Saturday discussed such topics as faith, learning from a noble example, the power of individuals, and the oil source of power in the kingdom of God.

The afternoon's first speaker, Elder Thomas S. Monson, a member of the LDS Council of the Twelve, stressed the importance of the Sabbath.

Frequently, the impact of one person on the lives of others is not fully realized until years later, Elder Monson said.

"We understand we have come to earth to learn, to live, to serve in the cause of God, and to return to him," he said.

"The true measure is not how long we live, but rather how we live."

President Spencer W. Kimball's great example to the members of the LDS Church was the topic of Elder Robert E. Hale, a member of the First Quorum of Seventy, who said Kimball had many trials and liked him to be of the Old Testament.

"The story of Job relates that of the greatest tests we all face in our mortal lives, and that of our physical lives, he said.

"First, temporal setbacks, second, physical illness that test our faith and testimony; third, depression."

The courage and faith of President Kimball to overcome human trials came from all of us, he said.

"The Light of the Gospel" was the topic addressed by Elder Adeney Y. Komatsu, a member of the First Quorum of Seventy.

As we search for the light we are subjected to trials of our faith, Elder Komatsu said, quoting the prophet Mormon.

It is by faith that miracles are wrought."

"In the church, we have many opportunities to perform charitable acts," Elder Komatsu said. "Some of the greatest acts of charity begin with an outstretched hand of friendship."

Tremendous potential exists in each person, said Elder Angel Albrecht, a member of the First Quorum of Seventy, during the conference.

Albrecht emphasized the spiritual deterioration which results from not keeping the Sabbath day holy, neglecting prayers, breaking our covenants to sustain leaders of the church, and other sins.

Elder Dean L. Larsen, member of the presidency of the First Quorum of Seventy, and the real source of power and influence within God's kingdom lies in the quality of the lives of its members.

"We have good reason to feel encouraged and optimistic today as we observe the rapid growth of the church throughout the world," Elder Larsen said.

"There are evidences that we are not completely free from weakness within. Family problems multiply. Divorce is frequent. Physical illness that test our faith and testimony; third, depression."

"It is well for us to look within our own souls to assess our individual spiritual vital signs," he said. "Too frequently we are so preoccupied with the things of the world that we neglect to explore and sample the forbidden things of the spirit."

Addressing his comments to the "inactive members of the church," Elder L. Richards of the LDS Council of the Two Quorums, said members should not be afraid to meet the Lord and urged members to seek the scriptures.

"Jesus has given us many parables to prepare for his second coming," Elder Richards said, citing the parable of the talents, the parable of the ten virgins and the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

Reagan 'stars' on poster

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — America's 11 best-known movie stars will be on a poster to raise money for the Ronald Reagan Foundation. "Bedtime for Brezhnev" — a spoof of a regular early Reagan movie entitled "Bedtime for Bonzo" — is selling well for its two 27-year-old creators.

"From out of the west, they dusted off their

The cast of characters for the make-believe movie includes "good guys" Reagan, George H. W. Bush, Alan Alda and Dick Henry Kissinger, with Bette Midler, Fred Astaire, Muhammad Ali and Jerry Lewis as "bad guys."

Concert no winner

By DEBBI HRUSKA

Assistant Entertainment Editor
After three consecutive football victories by the Cougars over Utah State, the BYU band poured into the Marriott Center with intentions of celebrating the win at the Christopher Cross concert.

But the five-time Grammy award winner failed to perform anything worthy of a celebration.

Perhaps it was the late hour, the lack of a road map, the stage that caused the poor enthusiasm from the band. More appropriately, the reactions were because of a lack of enthusiasm from Cross in performing for the BYU crowd.

Cross, noted for his middle-of-the-road type music that has won national acclaim in the past two years with his familiar style with an attempt at a rock 'n' roll show complete with highly amped music and lots over-played, down-cut versions of his popular songs.

Taking the stage at 11:50 p.m., Cross got things moving by having his name and famous songs listed on the screen behind him as he sang "I Really Don't Know Anyways," which seemed to enthrone the audience.

Texas pop music

He followed the song by saying he was going to play a few Texas songs for everyone to sing along with down the game.

After the first three songs, his pop music sounded like a bad imitation of itself. No one in the audience was familiar with, "Like Arthur's Theme" and "Sailing."

In selected numbers, Cross had a backlog of stills that looked like childhood book illustrations.

What was impressive about the concert was the special lighting effects that conducted the music and captured the feel of Cross' MOR music.

After the show, Cross was asked if he was behind Cross was an able backup band of five musicians who complemented Cross' singing and dancing, but the band's performance seemed to be more of a way to cover up the mistakes rather than a way of staging a clean rock 'n' roll show.

The highlight of the show came with the performance of Cross' first hit song, "Ride Like the Wind," which he said descended from his "feeling about the wind" in the desert. The intense Sounds of rushing wind and a film of clouds swirling on the backdrop brought the crowd to its feet.

For the first time during the concert Cross played to the poly BYU audience instead of at them.

The only drawback about "Ride Like the Wind" was it was Cross' last number. After having to wade through a package of loud MOR songs, the audience finally had something worth cheering about.

Encore

The newly enthused crowd was let down as Cross came back to perform a MOR encore number that he had already done in the first half.

But Cross managed to pick up the tempo again with another hit song, "Say You'll Be Mine," which was well received by the audience. Cross' performance left a lasting mark in the music world with his exceptionally high tenor voice, but as a concert performer, he had a long way to go before equaling his singing talents.

It would be easy to excuse him because of a lack of experience on the stage, but Cross seemed to be more than willing to learn from the opening act for the Beach Boys.

In concert Cross failed to relate to his audience and the audience failed to relate to his songs to his songs that a listener couldn't get from his records.

Opening the show for Cross was Dirt Band guitarist John McEwen, who provided humor while playing a variety of guitars and banjos as people arrived at the Marriott Center from his arrival.

McEwen announced the Dirt Band would be playing at BYU at the end of October.

Christopher Cross, winner of five Grammy awards for his new style of middle-of-the-road music performed in the Marriott Center Friday night after the BYU-Utah State football game. Although familiar hits such as "Art Thorne," "Sailing" and "Ride like the Wind," were plauded, the show was not well received.

Prints on display

Appearing throughout October on the east side of the fourth floor of the Marriott Center will be a series of prints by Jim Cave.

Canadian from England, received his art education at the Royal College of Art in Liverpool, England.

His prints have appeared in national and international exhibitions.

His collections are for sale in schools, Europe, Canada and the United States.

According to J. D. Jeffery, director of the gallery, Cave's prints portray human figures.

"In some of his works he seems to have quality for his images,"

Allen said. "For instance, a face appears in a print in which it's opened and expresses the images or emotions of the person.

Allen said he feels some of Cave's work is very expressive.

"His line is very sensitive," he said. "It has a three-dimensional quality, like embroidery, I guess, that makes that print stand out."

Allen pointed out

more the artist uses

more expression in the face and does very intimate kinds of things in his prints."

His works have been in the World Print '77

Exhibition in San Francisco, and the National Print competition at Georgia

State University in Atlanta.

Y suffers scare, slips by USU 32-26

Game decided by Shell's score

By JAY EVERSEN

Assistant Sports Editor

Friday night's 32-26 victory against the Utah State Aggies was not a run-of-the-mill ball game at Cougar Stadium by any means. The Cougars could not put the ball in the end zone at halftime and became the victim of a tie.

The issue wasn't decided until BYU linebacker Todd Shell intercepted a Chico Canales' pass on USU 13-yard line with 3:07 remaining and scored unopposed into the end zone, giving BYU a 32-26 victory. Cougars had a 26-20 victory over USU in front of 41,129 fans, the second largest crowd in BYU history. The win extended the Cougars' winning streak, the longest in the nation, to 17 games.

Shell's game-saving interception broke a 26-26 tie and vindicated a frustrating, yet heroic effort by embattled Cougar coach Jim Gunther.

Shell described the interception as the ultimate dream of a linebacker. "I saw the screen coming," he said. "Mike Morgan was putting pressure on the quarterback. I knew I had it."

BYU's All-American quarterback, Jim Plater, had to work this out from the lines due to an overextended shoulder he had all the week before against the University of Colorado. His replacement, sophomore Steve Young, in his first start as a Cougars' starter, established himself as a legitimate heir to Cougar quarterback throne by passing for 247 yards and two touchdowns. Young also led all rushers with 63 yards on 21 carries, the longest being a key 26-yard run on a third down, setting up an important third-quarter touchdown.

Young said he came into the game with big butterflies in his stomach, but soon warmed up, as best he could. I think that showed early in the game that I was going to be able to play. I am not good on offense, but I feel like we got the job. I feel a lot better about going into the game and I think we are going to be successful. The Cougars were also without center Bartas, with a broken ankle, and defensive back K. Brady, suffering from back spasms.

Young had to play the entire game, including the half, unable to sustain a scoring drive until his hit wide receiver Dan Plater for a 53-yard to 26-yard pass to set up the third-quarter touchdown. Running back Scotti Pettis took the ball and the right end on the next play for the game's first touchdown. The Cougars' second score after the Aggies had opened the scoring was a 14-yard touchdown pass from Canales to wide receiver Mike Morgan.

After the Cougars' game took on a seesaw, three times the caught up, a major factor in gunther's decision to start Young. The Cougars had kicking extra points and field goals. Gunther, BYU's place-kicker, missed on two extra points and one field-goal attempt. J's kicker, Dale Money, missed two extra and a field-goal attempt.

Young said each failed attempt was a combination of a bad kick and a bad holder.

"It's just been an unlucky day," said Gunther. "I've never had such a day in my life — but we won and that's all that counts."

Key to the Cougars' successful comeback was return of running back Waymon Hamilton, who had been injured. After an injury, Hamilton entered the game in the third quarter for 49 yards and two touchdowns, including a 26-yard run around right end, the first run from scrimmage for the Cougars this year.

My ankle was hurting," said Hamilton, "but I wanted to play."

Hamilton's long run came with 4:08 left in the game, off a 50-yard drive in seven plays and the Cougars' first drive of the game. Young ran defense well and called an audible in the time remaining. "There was nobody within 20 yards of me," said Hamilton. "It was just a minute play and I was running for a minute and a half in their territory, Shell up and I was running for a minute and a half and we were pleased to win," said Cougar head LaVell Edwards. "Utah State played well but they didn't catch the ball. We had a good defense and I think they should have won. I was if our guys because they did what they had been needed to do."

wards said he felt Young's performance got especially better as the game went on. "It's a good thing to have a good start and then all that stress," he said. "We told Steve if he was any question, not to throw the ball up, run it in. He did a good job."

wards said McMahon's status will have to be re-evaluated from day to day. "If Jim does not return to play, we are going to have to make sure that he is healthy again," he said.

Head coach Bruce Snyder said he was not sure if he would start Young again, especially that of the defense. "I feel that our players played very well," he said.

He is for young people to come back after we waited it very badly, but we're going to pick up the pieces and keep going," said Young.

Big mistakes equal big plays

By KEVIN STOKER

Sports Editor

It's been three years since BYU lost in Cougar Stadium. In fact, last Beach State, which lost 41-25, came the closest of any team in those three years.

But injuries to All-American quarterback Jim McMahon and All-SWC safety Mark Brady, both team captains, somewhat evened things out for the Aggies.

That was the intangible. It was the emotional intrastate rivalry. It doesn't matter what the team records are, it's going to be an intense battle.

The deciding play of the game — Todd Shell picking off Chico Canales' screen pass with 3:07 to play and trotting 12 yards for the winning touchdown — was typical of how the entire contest was played.

There were a lot of big mistakes and a lot of big plays, said BYU head coach Alvin Edwards. Asked if he was ever worried about the outcome, the 10-year mentor said, "Yes, like about the last 60 seconds."

The four Aggie touchdowns were all set up by Cougar mistakes. The first one came after several BYU plays that a Freddie Fernandes fumble slip set up. The second came when a Cougars' Young's fumble to the 20 set up the second touchdown. Two pass interference calls set up the third, and the fourth Aggie touchdown followed a missed field goal.

But for every error there was an outstanding play. Young set up the Cougars' first touchdown by trapping a Cougars' end around and Dan Plater had beaten two others.

John Manning's leaping interception and a great catch by Neil Baldwin for a 26-yard gain set up the third score. The Cougars' 26-yard to set up BYU's third score, which tied the game at 20, and Young gamboled and pitched out to an incompletion. Plater then ran 12 yards for 10 yards to knot the score at 20 with 4:05 left in the game.

Although it was Shell's interception that made the difference, it was the combination of Young's running and Plater's passing that won the game, which Edwards said, "By all rights they (Utah State) should have won."

"You have to give Young a lot of credit," said Jim McMahon, "he was in there in there. He had really trouble at first ... but in the second half he really started slipping the ball."

What would the defense do to stop BYU's final drive? Young showed he had wanted the win, telling McMahon, "Jim, we gotta win this game, we can't lose."

"All he had to do was put forth an extra effort to make the big catches and build Steve's confidence," Baldwin said. Plater agreed and added, "He was great."

"But I'll tell you what," Plater said with a smile. "We may have the best quarterback back in the country."

Former Y grid assistant

Kragthorpe borrows strategy

By STACILEE FORD
Staff Writer

Does Kragthorpe has borrowed a bit more than offensive strategy from BYU — his Bengals are passing and winning.

The former assistant football coach to LaVell Edwards spent 10 years as an offensive coordinator for the Idaho State Bengals before his appointment nearly two years ago. He has been turning the BYU Big Sky Conference football team into a fast.

Kragthorpe readily admits his coaching style is similar to BYU's. Many of those who have watched the game say the two coaches' passing strategy is being copied in the passing tradition so firmly established at BYU.

An overhaul effort Kragthorpe began in 1979 has been rewarded with players and philosophies similar to those found at BYU. Kragthorpe instigated a passing blitz that gave ISU a 10-0 record. His record was 4-0.

Before Kragthorpe traveled to ISU, the Blue Jays readily care about Danny Ainge, as they insist, is on the phone this week to the Boston Celtics and come to a quick financial settlement.

And if for some reason the Blue Jays think

Ainge will change his mind about retiring from baseball and return next spring, they are still planning to do so.

Last week's court ruling that maintained

Toronto still has a valid contract with Ainge only serves to remind him of the Celtics negotiating immediately with the Celtics without the Blue Jays' approval. Now, he must wait for the two teams to reach an agreement.

The Blue Jays are training camp for the upcoming National Basketball Association com-

Friday. Instead of being there, Ainge was packing his bags to return to Boston.

He was a free agent and heading home to Provo. He shook hands with Blue Jays President Peter Bawas, who said, "We see you in the spring."

Ainge replied, "I'm gone. I'm gone from baseball."

Bawas laughed.

People who know Ainge are convinced he won't return to baseball. Ainge made a major mistake last September signing with the Blue

Jays, and acting without consulting his agent.

Ainge's decision to permit the Blue Jays to include that addendum to his contract which prohibited him from playing professional basketball.

OK, the kid made a mistake. And from the Blue Jays' point of view, it's easy to understand why they want Ainge to return. They've invested four years of their time, he turns around and leaves. But that's life. Nobody said it was easy. People change.

Ainge is, quite simply, a superb basketball player. He was a natural who was well-taught enough in baseball for it to be an option. He chose the lifestyle of baseball over the lifestyle of basketball. Now, he's not going to be able to make a living in basketball, but he will see that and only a contract stands in his way.

Deep down, Bawas knows Ainge won't be coming back. And, of course, it's to Ainge's benefit to leave. Not only does he leave the situation quickly, Boston has offered to repay Toronto the $300,000 bonus Ainge collected.

Toronto is a better team. They will see him somewhere in between.

And in the meantime, Ainge will sit and wait. He's a natural young man who feels treated fairly from day one.

The bottom line is Ainge is a happy player. He's a natural who wants to play basketball, it affects the rest of your life. He wants to play basketball, and the Blue Jays should let him do that.

The Celtics and proceeding on the matter immediately will make it easier for all parties.

Toronto can go after Ainge, but he's not a free agent. The Celtics can work Ainge into their system and Ainge, most importantly, can do what makes him happy.

Bengals possessed the nation's longest losing streak. ISU finished out its '79 season with a 44-0 record. To that end, the Bengals' season was without a single victory.

When asked what he was doing to create such an about-face with the Bengals, Kragthorpe said, "I'm trying to get us all to pull together." Twenty-seven of the 70 team members are new this year, and Kragthorpe feels it is important to have these new and returning player parts into a unified whole.

Reaction to Kragthorpe's 21-month effort has been enthusiastic. "I think the team is really starting to play like a champion," he said. Such change has come in several different areas for ISU. ISU is currently in third place in the Big Sky Conference, with a 4-0 record. The revenues of the ISU Booster Club have increased from $65,000 in the fall of 1979 to $100,000.

Revenue from ISU is gathering at a rapid rate. Attendance increased from an average of 4,000 fans per game to almost 10,000 at the end of last year, and the Bengals are packing into the Minden. Attendance for games this year has been between 10,000 and 12,000.

Fans and coaches say they are looking forward to the 1982 Big Sky championship in the near future. Kragthorpe is in the lead.

The Bengals averaged 261 yards per game last season, compared to 180 yards per game the previous year. In addition, 80 school on Big Sky records have been tied or broken by ISU in passing and total offense.

Kragthorpe says he feels his first obligation to the fans is to entertain them.

"Of course winning is our final objective," he said. "I think the players and fans both need to enjoy the game."

Although Kragthorpe is reminded frequently that his coaching style closely resembles BYU's, he has some super strategies, but the individual players here are responsible for making things work.

members of a pro-homosexuality group comprised of Mormons and ex-Mormons, marched around Temple Square between Sunday's conference sessions. The march was the first gay rights demonstration to be approved by the Salt Lake City Council.

Gay Mormons march in protest

ALT LAUREN SMITH — A group of Mormons and ex-Mormons marched around Temple Square last night chanting their message of equality and tolerance.

17 gay-rights marchers attended and quizzical looks from the onlookers were the only response between some of the LDS general conference. "We are your children," read one sign. "We are here to let you know we are here to make people notice." And Randy Smith, the 25-year-old general president of the group, said "We are human beings like everyone else."

"We want people to realize there is more to us than the Mormon cliché," he said. "We won't just go if the church ignores us."

Smith, a BYU student, said he feels homosexuals are treated unfairly by the LDS church.

Family pressure

There are a lot of people who adore us up to their homophobia," Smith said. "Many gay people are pressured by their parents to leave the church."

He said the Mormon Church's mission is to make people

good Christians and keep the church out of the law,"

he said.

Spain, France, and Central America received the

Australia and New Zealand also was in Spanish.

Throughout the United States and Canada, 2,500 chapels received the audio portion of the conference

through closed-circuit audio lines,

she said.

Several hundred cable TV stations carried conference live, said

Ms. Dettmar. She said the exact number of stations that carried the conference was not known.

Ms. Dettmar said about 50 state centers in the United States and Canada received sessions of conference via satellite.

Videotapes of the conference were made and sent to stations that could not telecast the conference live, said Ms. Dettmar.

Also, video tapes were made of the conference in different languages.

read another banner carried by the protesters, "We feel Utah is becoming a Mormon state," Church Smith said. "There is a lot of discrimination against gays. At the moment, we are being thrown out of apartments, lose jobs and we are generally harassed — all because we are gay. We want to change this."

"We would really like to sit down with church representatives and tell them the truth of the story," said Jerry Cude, a marcher from Salt Lake City.

Group claims

Charts of the group's footfall eight: gay is just as good as straight," preceded the arrival of the group. Most people, however, seemed more interested in watching their box lunches and talking.

"We got a lot of stares so we did get noticed," Smith said. "Then a summer I had. I don't think the march really changed the ideas people have about us but we had to try and get our message across."

Sunday's march was the first of 45 planned to be approved by the Salt Lake City Council. "Any group that wants to march has to file a protest first," said Lt. Ken Kinney of the Traffic Division of the Salt Lake City Police Department.
